Instructor

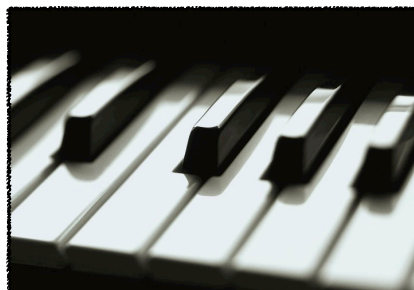

Brenden Pugh is from Winterset, where he grew up in a musical world. He has just finished the music program at SWCC, where he was a Jazz Bass Guitar Major. Through school he has been on national and international tours, playing bass for various vocal jazz groups and instrumental combos. Along with playing for these groups, Brenden has also arranged music for both groups.

Brenden's passion is bass guitar, however he also plays piano, harmonica, trombone, baritone, trumpet, tuba and aspires to learn violin and mandolin. Brenden has also spent time in a recording studio working his own projects along with other artists' music. Brenden is married to Sarah Heldenbrand Pugh, dance instructor with Leslie's Dance Emporium.

Many studies of music have found that being exposed to music at an early age helps develop the brain.

Music helps develop the part of the brain that works with developing mental pictures.

Children exposed to learning music tend to develop a higher standard of completion for everything they are involved in.
